

AT YOUR SERVICE

For everything you ever wanted to know (but were too lazy to look up), comes 82ASK – an amazing mobile service that claims it will very quickly answer any question you text to 82275.

And they mean any question, from 'What is the meaning of life?' to 'Do sheep shrink when it rains?'

The mammoth database created by 82ASK matches questions to queries submitted by other mobile users, logging the answers and pinging them out automatically.

New queries are forwarded via keywords in the SMS to real people – often experts in their field – who research and answer pronto.

It's a top-quality service that works just as well as a research tool for an important presentation as it does for Christmas shoppers trying to find the cheapest Robosapien in their vicinity.

Customers are charged £1 direct to their mobile phone bills – but only for correct answers, not for the text question.

You can also go to their website, www.82ask.com for some online quizzery.

We have teamed up with 82ASK to give every Metro reader one free text question.

Whether you're stumped by a cryptic crossword clue on the morning commute, bored in the office and unable to bypass your IT department's Internet protocols or just obsessed with trivia, why not have a go? All you have to do is text the prefix MZZ and your question to 82275. Then sit back and wait for the buzzer.
